Resumen

Internal Role Title: Clinical Research Medical Advisor

Location: Malaysia #LI-Hybrid

About the Role:

The Clinical Research Medical Advisor (CRMA) is accountable for all Malaysia & Singapore clinical medical aspects associated with development and prioritized research programs or trials. This role involves providing clinical strategic and tactical leadership, gathering and acting on clinical, medical or scientific insights, and ensuring adherence to safety standards and clinical data quality. The CRMA will collaborate closely with various country functions to ensure successful trial start-up, timely recruitment, and mitigation of potential delays. Additionally, the CRMA will provide clinical or medical expertise during interactions with external experts and regulatory authorities.

About the Role

Key Responsibilities:-

- Provide clinical strategic and tactical leadership for country clinical development and research programs or trials.
- Gather, inform, and act on clinical, medical or scientific insights to optimize clinical trial implementation.
- Drive the identification and involvement of qualified investigators and overcome clinical recruitment hurdles.
- Ensure adherence to safety standards and clinical data quality in the country.
- Collaborate with country functions to ensure successful trial start-up, timely recruitment, and mitigation of potential delays.
- Provide clinical or medical expertise during interactions with external experts and regulatory authorities.
- Support planning, implementation, and follow-up of scientific, clinical or medical components of regulatory inspections and internal audits.

Essential Requirements :-

- Scientific degree (M.D., Ph.D., or Pharm.D.) with subspecialty training desirable.
- Minimum 2-5 years of clinical development experience in the pharmaceutical industry or clinical practice.
- Strong understanding of the overall clinical development process and ICH/GCP principles.
- Ability to manage studies from a scientific, medical or clinical perspective and solve complex issues.
- Effective leadership and communication skills to motivate cross-functional teams.

- Willingness to travel as when needed.
